in people who are already allergic to pollen, the body's immune system mistakes the protein in the produce for that of the plant and unleashes the reaction normally produced by pollen.